

EDUCATION BOARD PLOT, CHARGES TEACHER-WIFE

Mrs. de Fremery Says It Is Intention To Be Rid of All Married Teachers.

SUFFRAGIST HELP ASKED

Overstepping Jurisdiction, She Asserts, for City to Dictate Philosophy of Life to Employes.

Mrs. Henrietta de Fremery, who was formerly Miss Henrietta Rodman, and who decided to get married in the spring and did so without sending word to her employer, the Board of Education, told an audience in the Women's Political Union, No. 13 West 42d street, yesterday afternoon, that the board was plotting to justify its position in the case of child-bearing teachers whom they have dismissed by getting rid of married teachers altogether.

"They are going to make an effort to prove that married teachers are less efficient than spinsters," said Mrs. de Fremery. "When I received my ratlines after the board learned that I was married I found that they had been lowered. My principal said it was because I had failed to announce that I was married and because I refused to change my name on the register. First, they intend to lower our marks because we get married, then they will lower our efficiency ratings because our marks are lowered."

"The board, in the case of Mrs. Bridget Peixotto, makes it an act of insubordination to bear a child. It is going to try to stop its teachers from marrying. I know a teacher who was out a whole term with whooping cough. She got her half pay, and her district superintendent sent flowers to her while she was ill."

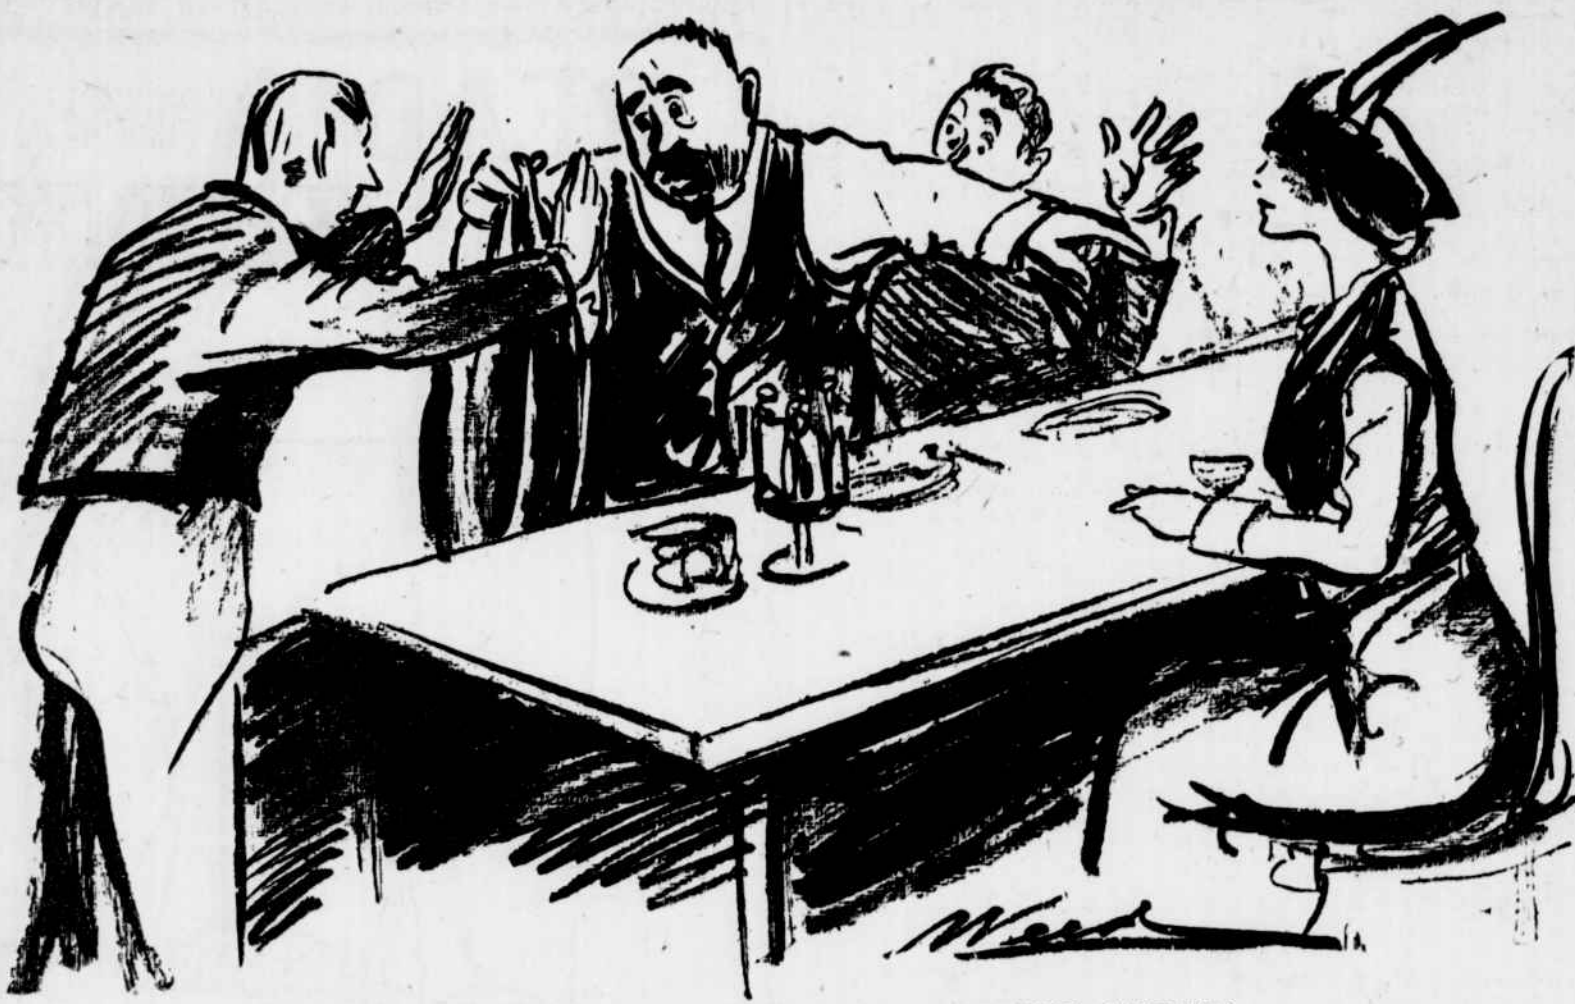

"The board rates whooping cough high in social importance, but forbids a teacher to rear a child. It isn't for the amount of absence that is involved, for they stand for that over and over in other cases."

"As a matter of fact, the Board of Education will hire married teachers with children, provided their husbands are unable to support them. John Martin, one of the Commissioners, says that the place for a woman with a baby is at home, where she may give her whole attention to it."

"At present the average service of a woman teacher is thirty years, and the average number of children to a family is three—one in ten years. One would think, according to Commissioner Martin, that Mrs. Peixotto was behaving terribly, contrary to the custom of the average American!"

"Mr. Churchill, the president of the board, says the place for a mother is in the home. He does not charge incompetency. He merely makes it a moral issue. The Board of Education has not any data to show that married women or mothers neglect their job."

Mrs. de Fremery said the Peixotto case showed unquestionably that the board was overstepping its jurisdiction by dictating the philosophy of life to its employes. As a result, she said, it is resorting to the methods of the big corporations in forcing ing out the skilled, highly paid operatives in favor of the cheaper and less skilled help.

"Either they are guilty of a mean, narrow economic motive or they are blinded by prejudice," she said.

Mrs. de Fremery announced that a mass meeting of protest against the decision dismissing Mrs. Peixotto would be held in three weeks in Carnegie Hall, at which Dr. Stephen S. Wise, of the Free Synagogue, would speak. The majority report against Mrs. Peixotto, drawn up by Abraham Stern, chairman of the committee which reported the case, she said, would be read and resolutions would be sent to the board.

Mrs. de Fremery, in reply to a question, said the board gave an increase of pay to a teacher who was absent to write a thesis which brought her the degree of M. A.

"What we women suffragists must do," she exclaimed, "is to make a proposition to the board that bearing a child—becoming a mother, in other words—be placed on the same plane as obtaining a degree of M. A."

This was greeted by laughter, but Mrs. de Fremery maintained that no pun was intended.

CANADA'S CONSTITUTION.

From The Christian Science Monitor.

The institution of a suit to test the constitutionality of the Canadian immigration law brings to light once more the fact that Canada has no constitution other than what may be found in the acts fixing the spheres of provincial and Dominion jurisdiction. These acts, however, seem to be sufficient for the determination of disputed points in the organic law, and that is all the most formal of constitutions could do, or be expected to do.

FOR THAT MONDAY DESPAIR

What Can We Do with Sunday's Cold Roast Beef Solved Appetizingly.

The fact that her family tires so quickly of cold meat often makes a housewife hesitate about purchasing roast beef, because she knows how long it must last to be worth the initial expenditure. Fortunately, however, the possibilities contained in cold roast beef are almost endless, especially if care has been taken in the roasting and the meat is not overcooked.

The housewife must also remember that any meat, when warmed over, requires more delicate handling than is needed in its original preparation, and after being freed from coarse fat and gristle should be cooked only long enough to heat thoroughly, or else simmered very slowly, according to the nature of the recipe employed.

"With My Brains, Sir!"

Recipes for utilizing remnants of cold beef can be divided into two classes, namely, those to be used when it is cut into medium sized pieces, and those for the scraps that are so unpromising that they must be finely minced to be palatable. And, above all, don't be afraid to vary these recipes and rules, which, after all, are not so much rules as suggestions, to suit the exigencies of your own case.

Neither must you forget the story of a noted French chef, who, when he was asked how he had prepared a particularly delicious entree, answered modestly, "With my brains, sir!"

In the recipes given below are several excellent formulas, which may prove helpful to those housekeepers to whom necessity is a stern teacher, and who are willing to spend a little time and trouble in improving their daily menus.

Salmi of Beef.

Melt a spoonful of butter in a saucepan, and fry until brown a minced white onion. Then stir in a spoonful of browned flour, add slowly a cupful of strained stock, a few drops each of kitchen bouquet and of vinegar, a pinch of thyme (powdered) and a saltspoonful each of paprika and of celery salt. Simmer the sauce for three or four minutes, add a cupful of cold roast beef (cut into cubes), and ten chopped stuffed olives. Serve as soon as the latter ingredients are hot, and surround the salmi with triangles of hot toast. A little salt may be required, but the salt of the olives is generally sufficient.

Grilled Beef.

Cut the rare beef into presentable slices and dip each into mayonnaise dressing. Rub the dressing well into the meat with a knife blade, and lay the slices on a platter in the icebox for at least an hour. When ready to serve, fry in a hot frying pan, without fat or butter, and serve as soon as the slices are nicely browned on both sides. Accompany with horseradish sauce.

Lyonnaise Beef.

Warm up any cooked vegetables, like carrots, turnips or cabbage, in a little butter. Arrange the vegetable on a hot platter, cover with slices of rare roast beef that has been heated in a little of the brown roast beef gravy, and cover with a thick layer of browned Lyonnaise potatoes. Serve immediately.

Potato Turnovers.

This is an excellent method of utilizing both beef and cold potatoes. Mix with a pint of creamy mashed potatoes one well beaten egg, and after adding pepper and salt to taste roll the potato in flour. Then, with floured hands, form it into small balls, and press or roll them out very thin. Place a spoonful of savory minced beef (highly seasoned and moistened with a little gravy) in the center of each, fold over and press the edges together. Place in the ice chest to become very cold, and fry in deep hot fat to a golden brown.

Escalloped Beef and Macaroni.

This is a particularly nourishing and hearty dish, and may be served for dinner without any other vegetables, save a green salad. Place in the bottom of an earthenware pudding dish a layer of boiled macaroni, cover this with a layer of minced beef, and continue with alternate layers until the dish is nearly filled. Season with salt, pepper and bits of butter, and pour over a cupful of stewed tomatoes, to which have been added a minced onion and a pinch of ground cloves. Dust the top thickly with grated bread crumbs that have been mixed with melted butter, and bake slowly for about three-quarters of an hour.

MUST SHE KEEP ON HER COAT?

If Women Will Wear Masculine Waistcoats and Pockets, Is It Not Fair to Expect Them to Adopt the Etiquette That Goes with Them?

If woman adopts man's clothes must she not also adopt the etiquette that goes therewith? Is it just that she be permitted to remove her coat and sit waistcoated in a warm room, where man also fain would remove his coat and cannot? And if this be unjust what, then, if she remove also her waistcoat? It has been known to have been done, yea, even in public restaurants.

On this text, first the head waiter: "Would I ask a lady to resume her waistcoat and coat?" Oh, never, madame. If a gentleman should remove his coat the ladies would object, but if a lady removes her coat, ah, well, with a shrug, "I have had no objections yet!"

And thus the anti-suffragist: "Have we not said long ere this that woman had more than her rights; she had privileges that members of the other sex would never dream of appropriating and that she would resent if they did?"

"But that argument is a sword that cuts both ways," replies the feminist. "We may be permitted to wear waistcoats and pockets and even sport a stick, but wouldn't most men object if we strolled along the avenue smoking a cigarette? Not that I crave the privilege for myself, but just for the sake of argument."

But there are even more phases to the adoption of the masculine properties of dress by women. The waistcoat is only one. What about pockets? Just because "they" are putting them in skirts and coats—yes, waistcoats, too—must a poor girl give up her capacious handbag or all those cute, jingly things and use her pockets? Perish the thought! And the stick? Must no man stand ready to come to her defence because she carries it? And must the new crush hat for opera and theatre wear be removed from the head immediately upon entering the lobby, or can it remain until the curtain goes up?

Oh, won't somebody write a new etiquette book for the up-to-date girl!

Political Union as a climax for its Brooklyn campaign, which will begin to-morrow morning.

After a mass meeting in the Academy of Music the endurance contest for suffrage oratory will be begun. It won't make any difference whether the audience grows scarce in the early hours. The women will continue to talk. The all-night speakers will be Miss Caroline Lexow, Mrs. Nora Blatch de Forest, Miss Rose Winslow, Miss Mildred Taylor, Miss Jane Pinchus, Mrs. Florence Maule Cooley, Miss Beatrice Brown, Miss Kathleen de Vere Taylor, Mrs. John Rogers, Miss Alice Perkins, Mrs. Kate Batchelder, Mrs. Laura Ellsworth Carson, Dr. L. Adele Guinet, Mrs. Grace D. Wood and Miss Anna Constable.

CATCH MAN WHO SHOT GIRL

"Too Pretty to Live," He Said—Eluded Police Six Weeks.

Louis Herszkowitz, who was accused of shooting fourteen-year-old Mary Skolka, a moving picture actress, because she was "too pretty to live," was arrested yesterday after evading the police six weeks. Herszkowitz, who is nineteen years old, lives at No. 345 Sheffield avenue, Brooklyn.

Magistrate Nolan, in the Essex Market Court, yesterday held Herszkowitz in $2,000 bail for further examination on Tuesday. The defendant met the girl while working in a moving picture place at Delancey and Attorney streets. The shooting was on September 14. Yesterday the police heard that Herszkowitz had returned to his home.

A MAINE BLACK FOX.

From The Kennebec Journal.

A black fox, valued at $3,000, captured in this county, is now owned by Guy Nelson and is on the "fox farm" in Canada. This fox was captured in Starks and one leg was badly shattered. A physician was called, the leg was amputated and the wound has healed. Mr. Nelson owns the only fox farm in Somerset County. He has now thirty foxes, including mixed grays and red ones.

STAGE LURE WRECKS HOME

Albert U. Finlay Says Wife Is Actress by Choice.

(By Telegraph to The Tribune.) Boston, Oct. 19.—A passion for the stage is responsible for the disruption of his home, according to Albert U. Finlay, yachtsman, clubman and publisher, who has been ordered to pay his wife $100 for her use in defending his suit for divorce. Mrs. Finlay has filed counter charges of cruelty.

Finlay, whose boats have won prizes in recent races on Lake Erie, says: "Mrs. Finlay's statement that she was forced to become an actress is simply ridiculous. I have been paying her $12 a week regularly. She went on the stage because she wanted to, not because it was necessary."

Mrs. Finlay claims she was forced to go on the stage to support herself. The couple have five children, who live with their father.

SULZER'S OWN STORY

What He Would Have Revealed in Court Had He Been a Witness

A MOST REMARKABLE INTERVIEW

An intensely interesting narrative of Boss Murphy's attempt to usurp the powers of the Governor of this great State. An intimate and thrilling story of the methods pursued by the Tammany Boss to rule or ruin Governor Sulzer. THE GREATEST HUMAN INTEREST DESCRIPTION OF THE "INVISIBLE GOVERNMENT" OF NEW YORK STATE EVER PRINTED.

Governor Sulzer unseals his lips and tells for the first time, in his own words, and in detail, of the conversations, threats, temptations and intrigues preceding his impeachment.

EXTRACTS FROM WHAT GOVERNOR SULZER SAID:

"At last my lips are unsealed."

"Not a fight about politics, but a naked fight of dishonesty."

"I was amazed at Murphy's intimate knowledge of my personal affairs."

"It was Gaffney or war—Gaffney, the $30,000 expert advice man."

"I fought the chief, the invisible chief."

"I ASKED ONLY TO BE LET ALONE."
